GAME NOTES TO ALL PLAYERS:

A couple of questions were brought up by Don Williams that I'm going to answer here.

1) I have no size limitation on press. If I were to get huge amounts I might have to limit it. I would really appreciate it though if when someone generates a lot of press, that it is supplied in copy ready format (like the English press in 82AL).

2) My houserule #22 will stand as written. If it is a rule change that would affect a game's play I would put it up to the players for a vote. But, if it's not (like my recent requiring of codewords on phone orders) I will implement it at my discretion. Of course, I'll be deciding whether a change warrants a vote.

Odds and Ends:

Hai! Jikai!'s official circulation is now 42.

This is my 1st anniversary issue. Let me know what you think of the new format. I'll be going to it rather often now that HJ has increased in size.

The Runestone Poll results and the Top 100 Stars are included on insert.

- Italy to R/T: Looks like you get no two way, all I can say is toooooooo bbbbbbbbaaaaaaaaaaddyyyyyyyy!!!!!! Why don't you give me a few centers and we can possibly work something out...
- Ger to Fra: I have a feeling our Italian friend may have sold out to the enemy. He's pretty far gone, spiritually, you know. Just the other day he threatened to stab me in a bourse game. Plus he always spells Sacramento wrong.
- Ger to Eng: After we finish off Russia, let's make the Barents Sea our neutral zone. North Africa can be your neutral zone with France. OK?
- NAPOLEON to YELLOW STAIN: I hope you have finally decided to try out those northern climes. I think you will find them most refreshing.
- NAPOLEON to CZAR FREDERICK: I hear tell that your ambassador to Turkey has been misleading the Sultan as to the climate further north. For example you have reportedly told the Sultan that Siberia extends down to Rumania! However, I have taken the liberty of mailing some postcards of the beautiful Ukrainian countryside to the Sultan, who expressed his interest to see it as soon as possible. Thought you'd like to know (Ha, ha, ha!).
- NAPOLEON to WORLD: Viv la Defense League!
- GM: More press on next page.

Press:

ENGLAND to FRANCE, GERMANY - So we go for the obvious: The two tempting jugular veins, pulsing with life blood just below the surface of the scrawny Scandinavian neck. (It is humorous, in a jocular vein) Has the Russian been all too aware of this vulnerability and guarded himself well? Or has his hand shot up in an automatic gesture to protect his Skaggy windpipe? I love it! In what other game can you be the weakest participant and still be involved in it up to your eyeballs?

ENGLAND-TURKEY - Sharpen up your scimitar and stab, stab, stab.

FROM THE DIARY OF ONE CORPORAL MARCEL LEBEC. SEPT. 21, 1906 - I have had the most unsettling of experiences here in the province of Yorkshire. As I recuperate here in the white-washed walls of an English infirmary, I feel compelled to record my tale, if only to cleanse my mind as clean and white as the walls that now surround me.

When we were told by our CO that we were to bivouac in the barn of the poor country farmer and his three lovely daughters, every soldier in our company had the highest of hopes for a most pleasant stay, if you know what I mean. But the Sargeant soon dissolved all expectations ~~hope~~ by employing strict measures to insure that the men remained on the ground floor while the females slept safely and securely in the lofts. I was fortunate enough through rank (or unfortunate enough as you shall see) to secure a small tool shed in the back stalls, quite apart from the raucous snores of the rest of the company. The very first night, I was awakened from a sound slumber to find the two younger daughters on either side of me, completely unfettered by clothing of any sort and in a very playful and naughty mood. They had entered the shed through a small trap door in the ceiling which opened directly into the loft. I frolicked with these nubile nymphs til I lay, exhausted at dawn. It was all I could do to arise at reveille. All that day I moved around in a daze, exhausted and barely able to believe my good fortune. And after three days (and nights!) of the same, my Sarge and the medic were convinced I was suffering from some exotic sleeping sickness. Little did they know how close to the truth they were! That night I told the two sex kittens that I desperately needed some rest, and they laughed and told me they would leave me alone, but that the next night their eldest sister wished to pay me a visit by herself. I eagerly complied, for the eldest was also the most beautiful and alluring of the three and had remained in a queenly aloofness to the troops ever since our arrival there, which only served to increase her desirability. Sure enough the following night I watched as the tall and elegantly formed silhouette emerged from the trap door in the ceiling, and without a word began to perform the most amazing erotic acts upon my body, the likes of which I have never experienced, nor likely will ever experience again. Towards dawn, she unexpectedly left as silently as she arrived, leaving me in a state as close to perfect bliss as I shall ever come, here on earth or in heaven.

(I must leave off here as the nurse has arrived with my nightly medication)

PRESS:

Redlands-Strombor Players: Good luck, guys, and good cunning... somewhere... not in France... never in France...

Williams-Touchette: Parle vous francais? Kind of a dumb question, but that's about all the french I know.

Iron Duck-Titanium Man: Please, not here... whimper, whimper... waugh! waugh!

Con to Everybody But France: Twice before Titanium Man has saved the Diplomacy hobby from the dread Duck press. (In China, it's pressed duck.) If any duck press shows up in this game, T-Man will rush to the rescue. That includes, but is not limited to, "Le Duck", "Quack Froggy", and "Charles de Duck".

For "Bridgette Barduck" we may make an exception.

Iron Duck-Wood-durk: Pax vobiscum!

GM to Titanium Man: You've got your work cut out for you. You've already been surrounded by duck press.

GM to Iron Duck: As you can see... here already.

France-Silly Basque Rebels: Prepare to die, scum!

France-Game: Aut Caeser aut nullus, aut vincere aut mori! Oderint dum metuant...

France-England: Translation? Either a Caesar, or a nobody, either to conquer or to die! Let them hate, so long as they fear...

GM-France: Didn't anybody ever tell you? Latin is a dead language.

CZAR MICHAEL to KING WOODY: Believe me, theres absolutely nothing of worth in Scandinavia, just ice and snow, glaciers and Russians...

CZAR MICHAEL to PRESIDENT DON: Are you sure you wish to meet me in... London? I always thought London was part of England. Oh well...

CZAR MICHAEL to POPE PIERRE: I have decided to make a pilgrimage to the eternal city of Rome, however I am in a quandry as to which way to go to get there. Would you be so kind as to give me some guidance?

Tur to Fra: Too bad we didn't get countries a little closer to each other. Now, you'll have to do the impossible - at least for you. You'll have to survive long enough for me to get close enough to you so you can stab me. You'll never make it. Look out Woody!

Tur to Rus: If you stayed out of the Black Sea, I apologize for a touch of lack of trust.

Williams-GM: Okay, I give up... Before you choose to make it a quiz question, what or who is Strombor?

GM-Williams: A noble House of Zenicce. Now you'll probably want to know what or who Zenicce is.

PRESS: The dark figure stepped down from the train clutching the aluminum attaché case under one arm. He glanced cautiously around the station platform. It paid to be cautious in a city like Zurich, especially having arrived from a city like Munich, especially when one was on a mission of such international consequences as the one he was on. Hurrying now through the station, being careful to keep his eyes ahead of him, yet wary, not wanting to arouse suspicion or attract attention, he made his way outside to the waiting taxi. Pulling away from the curb. Did he see a short man in a gray overcoat hurry into the cab behind them at the last minute? Easing out into the flow of traffic of the thoroughfare, the dark man with the even features set into the determined look of a man who knows his purpose slides over in the seat to position himself behind the driver. He leans over to ask the driver a question and discreetly spies the the cab behind him, now pulling out into the thoroughfare. Going the opposite direction. Easing back into the seat, he pulls out a Sherman's from his breast pocket and lights it up and takes a long pull of nicotine. It's been a long and hazardous trip since Brussels so many weeks ago. Then Amsterdam, Berlin, Munich, and now here. So close. But it's not over yet. No sir! Not by a long shot. You could say this is just the beginning he thought with a sense of dread that made him tired. More tired than he had been in his entire career as the Timamou.

The zine/subzine lists should be adjusted to account for

Bersaglieri 6.10 (19)

Festungs Hof 5.88 (9)

Hai! Jikai! 5.88 (17)

Some voters listed these as zines, others as subzines: I leave the assignments up to those who are familiar with the publications.
